Analytics Report

Predicted engagement (Week 1) - LinkedIn: 1.2 K impressions → ≈ 180 likes, 45 comments, 12 shares; 8 qualified inbound queries. - Twitter: 2.8 K impressions → ≈ 65 likes, 22 retweets, 9 replies; 3 direct messages from recruiters. - Hiring portal (Glassdoor/Indeed): 150 views of the “Quant■Career 2026” posting → ≈ 22 applications, 5 qualified leads. Strongest piece – LinkedIn long■form article on “Emerging Quant Roles for IIT/IIM grads”. It aligns with the CMO's 7/10 LinkedIn score, leverages the platform's professional tone, and generates the most substantive discussion (comments from senior quant managers). Improvement vector for weakest piece – Twitter thread. The 7/10 Twitter rating masks low interaction depth. Refine the hook, add visual data snippets, and tag key influencers (e.g., @QuantCafe, @MLOpsHub) to boost retweets and conversation. Three recommendations for next week 1. Amplify the LinkedIn article with a short video recap; cross■post to the company's newsletter. 2.

Create a carousel on Twitter that visualizes salary bands and skill matrices—each slide should prompt a poll or question. 3. Launch a targeted hiring campaign on niche quant forums (e.g., Quant StackExchange, r/quant) to capture the 8/10 hiring momentum. Brand risk flags - Avoid "IIT/IIM elite" phrasing that could be perceived as exclusionary. - Verify all salary data against public sources to prevent regulatory or reputational backlash. - Ensure no confidential compensation packages from current hires are disclosed.
